

ABSTRACT

A substrate is exposed through immersion liquid supplied by a liquid supply system. Prior to being exposed, a map of the surface of the substrate is generated at a measurement station. A liquid supply system fills the space between a measurement system and the substrate so the measurement takes place through liquid.